(ST. LOUIS, MO) – On Wednesday, May 18, Democratic Whip Steny Hoyer will join Russ Carnahan in St. Louis for a 'Make It In America' Forum where they will discuss ideas for revitalizing American manufacturing, creating jobs and helping small businesses grow.

Hoyer and Carnahan will speak with area workers, students, and small manufacturers at Forest Park Community College at 2:00 p.m. CT.

“The world is changing, and Washington has made things worse by ignoring American manufacturing, and stifling American ingenuity,” said Carnahan. “Here’s what hasn’t changed: Americans are still the most creative and productive people in the world. We’re still great at making things. That’s why I support the Make It In America agenda – because American manufacturing can and should be the central driver of our economy again.”

Carnahan has pressed the ‘Make It In America’ agenda in order to help support job creation today and in the future by encouraging businesses to innovate and make products in the US and sell them to the world through strengthening our infrastructure and prioritizing investments in key areas like education and energy innovation.
